She greatly rejoiced at his visit, even at the moment when her long illness was fast approaching its fatal close, because she saw in him one who represented the better feeling of the nation toward that wronged and helpless race whom she had so greatly loved. Upon her deathbed she committed to the hands of the Indian Rights Association as a solemn legacy the redress of past wrongs, present sufferings, and the future hopes of the Mission Indians. Mrs. Jackson died in cheerful confidence that the Association would be faithful to the trust committed to it. With a sense of responsibility for the execution of this trust the Association makes the present statement of the case at issue for the information of the public. Facts In The Case Of The Mission Indians. The following excerpts from a letter written by Hon. Hiram Price, Ex-Commissioner of Indian Affairs, are important as throwing light upon the case of the Mission Indians. This letter, addressed to the Hon. Secretary of the Interior, is dated at Washington, January 10th, 1884, and is as follows: (Excerpts from Commissioner Price s Letter. ) The injustice done the Mission Indians, and their deplorable condition, have been set forth by several Commissioners and treated of at...
